test benches

Dear Mr. Bronncke,

Herewith I like to confirm that NMI performs type testing on electricity meters for many years. All tests are performed in conformity with the well known IEC standards, like the 62052-11 series and others. NMI is one of the leading Notified Bodies in the world for these activities. On our website www.nmi.nl you can check this. For all these activities we have a suitable accreditation.

For the investigation of electricity meters we use test benches, built by ZERA, for already many years. The performance of these test benches is satisfactorily and suitable to carry out the required tests in conformity with the above mentioned standards.

With kind regards,
